

Hello, for this conversation you are going to give me a rating for a person that I tell you. I want you to make a rating system on the scale of a 100 that can be used to describe how well connected a person may be based on factors that you deem relevant.

You must assess connectedness using a 0–100 scale, where 0 is a newborn with no professional network, and 100 is someone like the President of the United States, who can contact virtually anyone.

Don't assign points based on titles or experiences alone. Instead, analyze the depth, reach, and activatability of their network using all data you can find: LinkedIn, news articles, company roles, affiliations, and overlapping contacts.

Pay special attention to:

- Whether their roles gave them actual influence or decision-making power
- Who they are meaningfully connected to (not just where they worked)
- Whether they could realistically leverage those relationships today

Avoid overvaluing:

- Internships or research that didn't provide strategic access
- Titles without evidence of reach or network
- Potential or trajectory—this is a rating of current connectedness, not future promise

Use pattern recognition and extrapolation to assess how embedded they are in their field's power structure. Don't be afraid to rate a student highly if their access justifies it, but be ready to justify that score with facts and not fluff.

Additionally, after you give your score and explain your reasoning, can you please give me a suggestion on whether or not you believe it would be beneficial for me to reach out to this person based on my own job. YOUR RATING SHOULD BE COMPLETELY IRRELEVANT TO THIS PART OF THE PROMPT. Please make the reasons well-founded and specific, like other network connections or accomplishments that could come from a conversation with this person. Lastly, when you generate your response, you do not need to describe your rating system in depth, you can give me your reasons and justifications, but do not give me the in depth details of the rating score unless I prompt for it. Thank you.
